

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method and concomitant apparatus for performing motion analysis on a sequence of images is disclosed. Initially, the sequence of images is received from a video source. The sequence of images captures a plurality of objects each moving along a trajectory in an area imaged by the video source. Motion information is extracted from the sequence of images for each of the plurality of objects. Spatial patterns are then determined from the extracted motion information.